

Ginger Barnett is the Chief of Mitigation and Recovery for the West Virginia Emergency Management Division. She has been involved in FEMA disaster assessments, declarations, and grants since 2019. Prior to joining the team at the WVEMD, she worked in fund development for the American Red Cross where she first became involved in disaster work. As a lifelong West Virginian, she has a passion for helping her fellow West Virginians and finding creative solutions to difficult problems that impact the state. In her personal life, she enjoys spending time with her husband and son, tending to the family's farm, rooting on the Mountaineers, and listening to true-crime podcasts with her son's blue Parrotlet named Harley.
